The Beth Bruno Project

The Twelve Healers Trust supports the on-going work of the Beth Bruno Project in Brazil.

The Beth Bruno Project was established in January 2010 to train health carers in the region of Santarém-PA. The project encourages the development of individual potential, while providing an opportunity to acquire a professional qualification. The health carers will be encouraged to establish local clinics within their communities, many of which are remote and without access to health care. These clinics will provide complementary therapeutic practices at a low cost, including herbal medicine, homoeopathy and bach flower remedies.

The project aims to stimulate the potential of every individual so that he or she can become an agent of change in their community.
